

Acute Limb Ischaemia

NCEPOD are running a study to look at the care provided to patients who suffer an Acute Limb Ischaemia. This is when a blood vessel in the arm or leg becomes suddenly blocked, causing a lack of blood supplying that limb.

We are collecting data from hospitals but also want to ensure we include the views of patients themselves.

Who can get involved?

Adult patients (18 and older) who have had an experience of Acute Limb Ischaemia.

What will be involved?

We want to collect information about the healthcare you have received when you had an Acute Limb Ischaemia. We are interested in care that was particularly good and where you feel that it could have been better. You can fill out a short anonymous survey:

We are also looking to talk to patients over an informal interview. If you are interested, please email ali@ncepod.org.uk or call 02072519060.

See <https://www.ncepod.org.uk/ali.html> for more information about the study.
